ABOUT ME

Kristin Shaw is a writer and mother; a former cast member and five-time co-producer of the Listen to Your Mother show in Austin; and owner of Firewheel Communications. She built her corporate career on telecommunications and technology and has over a decade of experience in aviation tech marketing. She supports SAFE Austin and Marathon Kids, and cars are her passion. In fact, she uses a revving engine as a ring tone.

Her work has been featured at The Washington Post; the Today Show site; Brain, Child magazine; Cosmopolitan; Good Housekeeping; Woman's Day; The Huffington Post; and more. More at kristinvshaw.com

Woman's Day

Kristin covers a diverse range of topics, in varying tones of poignant, funny, and engaging (depending on the outlet). She is unafraid to face tough topics like divorce, sexual assault, and domestic violence in her writing, and has been featured at national publications with her story. She frequently writes about parenting, cars, travel, and relationship dynamics.

For most of her career, Kristin has specialized in public relations, content creation, and marketing in the technology industry. Currently, she splits her time between two roles: director of communications for nonprofit Marathon Kids, and director of social media for Airport Improvement magazine. She established her own company, Firewheel Communications, to provide freelance writing services for companies and organizations globally.
